Abayomi Baiyere is a researcher at the Turku Centre for Computer Science and the University of Turku, Finland where he is currently pursuing a PhD with focus on the role of IT Capabilities in Disruptive Innovations. Before embarking on his PhD, he has worked with SAP Labs in France, ABN AMRO Bank in The Netherlands and as an IT Entrepreneur in Nigeria.

He currently has a triple master's degree in International Management of Information Technology from IAE Aix en Provence in France, Business Administration from University of Turku in Finland and Information Management from Tilburg University in the Netherlands. He was recently a visiting scholar at Bentley University in the USA. He has participated in various international conferences to present topics ranging from IT Innovation concepts to emerging market innovations. He is currently the Community Development Coordinator for ISPIM and the anchor for the ISPIM Porto Junior Researchers Lab.

His interests are in Internet of Things, Disruptive Innovations and the Sharing Economy.